STARVING INDIANS.

How the Washoes are affected by the Quarantine.
When the smallpox scare began in this city, the authorities thought it expedient to quarantine the town against the Indians, as it was feared that they would spread the disease by going from house to house doing chores and washing, and it is a well known fact that when once smallpox starts with the Indians the losses are about 75 per cent.

The quarantine against the Indians cut them off from their base of supplies and prevented them from getting employment.

Most of the Indians betook themselves to other parts of the country, but the Washoes who were camped in Kings canyon remained there, and are now on the verge of starvation.

When the gates of the city were closed against them they had a little flour and some pine nuts, but the pine nut crop was small last year, and so in a few weeks the poor Indians were out of supplies.

Night before last the cook at the Arlington hearing a noise, went out and found half a dozen Indians delving in the garbage barrel. They were weak and emaciated, and begged not to be driven away. He brought out some food, and they devoured it like starved dogs. After eating they started for the hills again, fearing arrest.

There should be a subscription raised at once in this city, and provisions sent to these poor creatures, who are ready and willing to work for something to eat, but are prevented from doing so by the quarantine regulations.

The smallpox feeling has abated here, the patients are recovering, and if the Indians are kept away from the Ormsby House there seems to be nothing to fear.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent)

Washington, March 1, 1889.
General Harrison and party arrived here on Tuesday, and Mr. Morten and family on Wednesday. A little incident in connection with the arrival of General Harrison's party has served to greatly enhance the popularity of the President-elect. A smart-Alex in charge of the Inaugural Committee that met the special train between this city and Baltimore, ordered the train run on a side track in the lower end of the city and had the Presidential party driven through side streets to their hotel, to the great disappointment of hundreds of people who had gone to the station to see the distinguished arrival, and other hundreds gathered on each side of Pennsylvania Avenue to get a glimpse of the party as they drove past.

General Harrison did not know of the trick played upon the people until he had arrived at the hotel, but as soon as he learned of it he lost no time in denouncing the authors of it, and saying that he wished the people to understand that he as well as they had been tricked. The vigorous words of the President-elect must have taken the conceit out of some of the Inaugural Committee, who somehow seem to have gotten the idea into their little seventy-nine heads that the inauguration of a President was a matter which concerned only them and their friends, and that the public was not to be taken into the question.

On Wednesday evening the President and Mrs. Cleveland gave a dinner at the White House in honor of the President-elect and Mrs. Harrison. The hotels are rapidly filling up, many prominent Republicans being among the visitors, and General Harrison since his arrival has had a continual stream of callers.

The death of Dr. Bliss, Garfield's physician, is the demise of literally the last notable figure in the trial of the assassin of Garfield. And yet that event only occurred eight years ago.

Owing to filibustering by Democratic Senators, Senator Hoar has about given up hope of getting his Southern election investigation resolution adopted. But he has offered an amendment to the Deficiency Appropriation bill that will probably accomplish one of the purposes aimed at. It authorizes the President to expend $25,000 for the detection and conviction of the person who destroyed the poll books and ballot boxes at Plummerville, Arkansas, at the last election for members of Congress and Presidential electors in that State. It was trying to get this information that caused the death of J. M. Clayton.

The President has issued the usual proclamation ordering an extra session of the Senate to meet at 12 o'clock March 4th., to receive an act upon executive communications, which means, to confirm the nominations of the Cabinet etc.

By the way, since the passage of the bill admitting Dakota, Montana and Washington, there has been a decided change of sentiment in regard to an extra session.

Many members who were in favor of holding one at an early day are now either opposed to it altogether, or else in favor of postponing it until the Fall.

What on Earth

Is the reason people will not, cannot, or do not see any difference in cheap nos trums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGG'S BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work, will cost you nothing. W. H. Chedic, Druggist.

Music Lessons.

Mrs. T. J. Meyers, formerly Miss Emma Friend, gives notice that she will re-commence piano lessons forthwith. Apply at residence, one door south of State Printing office.

HERE AND THERE.

How Different People Sell Real Estate.

Many people wonder why land in California sells for ten times as much as just as good land sells for in Nevada.

The reason why is very simple. The people of California are wise men who know how to sell real estate, the people of Nevada are chumps who do not.

For instance a man comes from the East to settle in California or Nevada, and hearing of our grand climate, healthy air and fertile soil, drops into some of our picturesque valleys to buy a farm. He runs across a likely little ranch, sees the fat cattle, sleek horses and green fields of alfalfa, and is so charmed with the prospect that he opens negotiations to buy. While he is doing this, the neighbors of the prospective seller get wind of it, and instead of seeing that new capital in their midst will be a benefit and probably bring more, each feels jealous that the stranger has not picked out his particular ranch, and so they start in to spoil the other fellow's sale.

In a short time the prospective buyer learns that the ranch he has taken a fancy to is a "hard ranch to run," and has "some trouble about the water right," "Soil played out," "Too wet for alfalfa," "Had a great deal of trouble with geoliers," "Get swindled if yer buy it," etc.

He reconsiders his intention, takes his $10,000 and starts for California. He looks at a ranch there, and when the men who occupy adjoining ranches hear of it they pour into his ears very different comments than what he heard in Nevada.

"Fine place, that ranch 'er Smith's."
"You're gittin' it mighty cheap."
"I ailers wanted that ranch myself."
"Wish I had his water right."
"He's got the boss soil, stranger."

"If I'd knowned it was for sale I'd jumped in long ago."
"That place'll make a man independent."

With these good opinions of the ranch coming from disinterested people he concludes it is a good buy and jumps in and purchases.

Now, those people are not disinterested, they have enough sense to know that every land sale in their vicinity increases the value of their own ranches.

The Nevada rancher, who is a natural born d— fool, cannot see it in that light, and when they all combine and run down the country they put a quarantine on it more effectual than the smallpox, and keep capital away. How long the idiots will keep this thing up, nobody knows.
